Property complaints fill council meeting

BY LIZ HAAS

The Bay St. Louis City Council fielded a number of complaints from disgruntled citizens at its Tuesday meeting, ranging from drainage problems to property clean-ups.

Max Elrod of Pecan Park Drive in Bay St. Louis expressed concern about inadequate drainage in the subdivision.

According to Elrod, the owners of lots 15, 16, 17 and 18 have filled their drainage ditches, which belong to the city, causing his lots, 14 and 15, to retain water.

He sent a letter to the city asking them to open the ditches to prevent flooding of adjacent land. Mayor Edward Favre agreed to use the city's equipment and manpower to install culverts, or drains, if the owners would purchase the culverts.

Many landowners refuse to purchase culverts and the problem stems from the drainage overflow from lots which have the culverts.

Elrod alleged those people who have filled in their ditches have violated the law and is opposed to the city assisting them by offering help to install the culverts.

The land extends from Spanish Trail to the railroad tracks and from Ballentine Street to St. Charles Street with more than 3000 feet of drainage involved.

The drainage system was laid out by developer, Jimmy Ciniche, and was approved by the city.

Subdivision owner, Ronnie Artiques, said if the city plans to install culverts, they will have to go all the way with it because those lots that do not have culverts will have a wash-out.

Company's use of herbicide concerns some local residents

BY TRACI BONNEY

Residents living on Felicite and Engman streets are watching trees die, and they don't like it.

Mississippi Power Company has been spraying the right-of-way areas underneath its power lines to control growth of trees and other plants that might damage the lines. The herbicide being used is killing more than just grass and weeds, though; oaks and other trees are being affected.

William Mills and his wife Marion are questioning other possible effects of the herbicide. Mrs. Mills said, "We were just concerned. Will this herbicide go into the water? If it can kill an oak, what will it do to the children? Does the power company plan to do this on every street in Bay St. Louis?"

Cliff Mitchell, forestry supervisor for Mississippi Power, said the herbicide used by the company is approved by both the United States Department of Agriculture and the Environmental Protection Agency, and has been declared not harmful to humans. It is cleared for use around ground water and potable water, and is applied strictly by the rules, he added.

"All three of the foresters here are certified in the use of herbicides.

"We use the herbicide because it's the most economical method of growth control available to us right now. If we bushhog, we have to do it every couple of years. With the spraying, we only have to do that every eight to 10 years or more."

He explained that the company has a certain amount of land, called an easement, around its power poles. The company may maintain an easement as it deems proper, but Mitchell said the company sprays only with the landowner's permission.

Around smaller lines, Mitchell said, there is what is known as a "power pole easement." This easement does not have a

Parchman inmate sues Hancock sheriff

BY TRACI BONNEY

Hancock County Sheriff Ronald Peterson is one of eight defendants named in a lawsuit recently filed by Emmett O. Bull, an inmate of the state prison at Parchman.

Bull, 54, a former Pass Christian resident, is suing Peterson and seven others who were involved in two 1984 cases in Hancock and Pearl River counties that resulted in the passing of two 30-year sentences on Bull for drug-related charges.

The other defendants are Pearl River Circuit Court Judge Michael Eubanks, District Attorney Richard L. Douglas and Sheriff Lawrence Holiday;

Hancock County Circuit Court Judge Kosta Vlahos and District Attorney Cono Caranna; U.S. Federal Marshal Marvin Breazeale; and Gulfport attorney Richard Dymond, who represented Bull.

In his lawsuit, which states only one side of the incidents, Bull claimed that those named violated his rights when they refused to allow him his right to fight extradition from Georgia to Mississippi and when they brought him to trial in two state cases while he was in custody to testify before a federal grand jury.

Bull is asking for $1 million in compensatory damages and $100,000 from each defendant in punitive damages.

Bull, who escaped from the Pearl River County jail in February 1983 and was arrested in New Orleans in November of the same year, was transported to jails and prisons in several states before ending up in federal prison in Atlanta, Ga. in April 1984.

While in Atlanta, the suit stated, Bull was notified that he was to appear in Hattiesburg to testify before a grand jury. Bull claimed, however, that he was taken instead to Pearl River County, tried and convicted, then taken to Harrison County for trial in Hancock County.

A continuance was granted, SHERIFF—Page 3A

Hancock school board amends junior high player eligibility policy

BY TRACI BONNEY

According to a motion passed by the Hancock County school board at its Monday meeting, seventh and eighth grade athletes must pass only to the next grade level in order to retain player eligibility.

The motion amended a district policy stating that students who fail a subject with an average of less than 60 failed the school year and had to repeat the grade level.

Under the original policy, a student who failed only one of his four subjects was promoted to the next grade level, as long as the failed subject was either social studies or science and the student failed with a 60 average or higher. If a student failed either math or English, or failed a subject with an average of less than 60, he was not promoted.

The policy also stated that a student who failed either a subject or the entire grade level was no longer eligible to play in sports activities the next year.

The amended policy states that a student who fails the grade level is ineligible, but one who fails only a subject still is eligible to play.

The board further amended the policy by deleting the condition that a failing average in a subject be a 60 or above to retain eligibility.

This means that a student who passes the grade level,

Veterans' home acceptable under Bay zoning ordinance

Matter to be resolved at June 13 meeting of Planning, Zoning Board

BY LIZ HAAS

Objections to a contract nursing home for veterans were raised by James McCarthy at the June 5 meeting of the Bay St. Louis City Council.

The home, located next door to McCarthy's on Chantilly Terrace, is owned by Linda Peterson.

Peterson has negotiated a contractual arrangement with the Veteran's Administration and has established a community residential care home where veterans pay her to live there and to be cared for.

McCarthy began his presentation by stating he was not opposed to veterans, and is himself a veteran receiving VA rehabilitation benefits.

According to McCarthy, the veterans pay Peterson monthly for rooms, meals, transportation, laundry, application of medication and various other tasks.

The fee for one veteran is approximately $500 dollars a month, he said, and additional charges are levied if veterans are in need of special diets, care and supervision.

McCarthy fears the home will be turned into a boarding house, which is in violation of the zoning ordinance.

Twenty-nine neighbors signed a petition and sent it to the Veterans Administration stating the home is a zoning violation, but found the VA is not interested in getting involved. They replied the veterans

ON PATROL

BURGLARY OF BUSINESS

Raynard M. Stiebing, 27, of the New Orleans area, was arrested June 1 and charged with the May 27 burglary of Terry's Seafood at Bayou Caddy, according to Hancock County Sheriff's Department investigators Nathan Hoda and Matt Karl.

While in custody, Stiebing admitted to four other burglaries in the Bayou Phillips area, according to Hoda. He was additionally charged with probation violation, for which he is being held in the Hancock County Justice Facility without benefit of bond.

Deputy Bill Pepperman conducted the arrest.

Blass takes Hancock, loses to McRae

BY JANET MCQUEEN

Pascagoula attorney Chuck McRae defeated incumbent Southern District Supreme Court Justice Joel Blass in Tuesday's election by a margin of 5,685 votes.

Blass, a resident of Pass Christian, carried Hancock and Harrison counties by large margins, but was defeated 27,902 votes to 22,217. Both candidates are Democrats.

McRae, 50, outspent Blass in a high-profile media campaign which consumed approximately $114,913 to establish name recognition among voters. Blass spent less than half that amount, listing $48,533 in campaign expenditures since early April.

Blass, 72, was appointed in February 1989 by Gov. Ray Mabus to fill the unexpired term of Justice Ruble Griffin of Bay St. Louis, who died in December 1988. The term will expire in 1996.

Canvassing the 27 counties which comprise the Southern District, McRae logged more than 17,000 miles in campaign travel, according to published reports.

He passed out freshly cut red carnations with attached campaign literature to voters along the way. His platform included promises to see the Supreme Court run more efficiently and to expedite lower court appeals through the high court.

McRae picked up endorsements from the Mississippi Prosecutors Association and the Mississippi Trial Lawyers Association.

He will be sworn in Friday in Jackson.

Card Of Thanks
 Our Law Enforcement Officers Are The Greatest

Law enforcement men have hearts, dedication, emotions and love for their fellow officers. They just don't drive around giving tickets. They risk their lives, and if you could just look into their eyes when they pull some young child out of the water dead you could see their emotions and such great concern.

Recently I had something happen in my family, and I was so upset. But I have to thank Sheriff Ronnie Peterson and Delbert Seay for all their thoughtfulness and hard work, giving up their whole weekend for me and my family.

Their deputies should be commended, Matt Karl and Bill Pepperman, in fact all of the deputies who gave all of their time for us.

Also, the Bay Police and Waveland Police and all of the law enforcement of Bay St. Louis and Hancock County. Great help also came from the dispatcher.

I, for one, say we should take hats off to these departments. They are tops and should be in everyone's life as we all depend on them.

Thanks again, guys and girls. I owe you my life and my family's life. I love you all for being there for us.

KILLING TIME

By Traci Bonney

Let's play tag — telephone tag

Tag — you — it!

That's what I've been doing lately, playing tag — telephone tag.

I'm sure you know the game. Just about everyone plays it these days.

You call; the person isn't in, so you leave a message.

Then you leave for an appointment or lunch, and the person returns your call while you're out.

You return his call returning your call — and he's out again.

This game of chase continues until one of you, feeling frustrated, leaves a rather terse message with a secretary. Then when the other calls back, the one who left the message has to soothe ruffled feathers.

Can anyone tell me how this infernal game got started in the first place?

Well, I guess someone — probably a reporter sometime way back when — once lost his patience waiting for a return call, or his trust that the person would bother or even remember to return the call.

So, the man (let's call him Joe) called several times, always picking the worst possible moments to call — the guy (how does Tom sound for our imaginary second person?) was at lunch, or in a meeting, or out of town, or on vacation.

Tom did return Joe's calls — but like Joe, Tony chose the wrong times to phone.

Joe was out interviewing someone, or taking photos (you know how cumbersome early camera equipment was), or getting a bite to eat.

So Joe and Tom played the first game of telephone tag.

These days, it's further complicated by such technology as call waiting, call forwarding and answering machines.

If you call someone, you may be put on hold or have your call transferred to another phone, or you may have to leave a message on a recorder.

The development of the answering machine has brought about a variation on telephone tag — answering machine tag.

You leave a message, then the other guy calls and leaves a message that he got your message, then you call back and leave a message that you got his message that he got your message....

Get the message? Does anyone have a solution to this problem, one that will eliminate or at least reduce the amount of telephone tag we play and that will still work with our busy lifestyles?

If you do, call and leave a message.

I'll try to get back to you — but we may have to play telephone tag. You know how busy reporters are.

pay for lodging themselves and if any member becomes a problem, he is returned to the veteran's hospital.

McCarthy and other neighbors alleged the home to be a business operation in a residential area and asked the council to enforce the zoning restrictions.

City attorney John Scafide said, "It is my opinion the subject use is tantamount to and consistent with single-family residential useage and is therefore a permitted use in a residential zone."

In his report, Scafide stated the city zoning ordinance defines family as one or more persons occupying a dwelling and living as a single house-keeping unit.

"It appears the veterans would be part of a single house-keeping unit; and as long as not more than three veterans reside in the house, then the use would not constitute a boarding or rooming house under the ordinance.

"It would, therefore, retain its residential and non-business/commercial character so long as three or less veterans are housed there," said Scafide.

He added, the subject use is analogous to a "home occupation" which is a permitted use in a residential zone.

"It should be noted the use will not generate pedestrian or vehicular traffic beyond that reasonable to the district; there will be no outside storage of materials and/or supplies; no signs will be involved and there will be no use of public facilities or utilities beyond that required for residential purposes," said Scafide.

Scafide said, "I think the council is justified in concluding that the matter is not one for remedial action under the zoning ordinance; and that such a conclusion is a valid and reasonable exercise of the legislative prerogative of the council."

He added, "Those aggrieved residents of the affected subdivision may have recourse under their subdivision restrictive covenants."

"However, such action would be a private civil matter to be pursued by those residents in Chancery Court by way of a suit for injunctive relief."

The matter was referred to the Planning and Zoning Commission and will be on their agenda for their June 13 meeting which will start at 7:30 p.m.

Three-year-old recovering after accidental shooting

BY TRACI BONNEY

A three-year-old Leetown girl, Kristen Ladner, was injured Sunday night when her four-year-old brother Austin accidentally shot her, according to Hancock County Sheriff's Department Investigator Glen Strong.

The incident occurred after the children's teenage sister heard a prowler outside their home and put a .22-caliber pistol in her room. Around 9:30 p.m., the children were in her room playing when they found the gun and the boy unintentionally shot his sister in the mouth.

Strong said the bullet entered the girl's mouth and damaged her teeth, then ricocheted off the palate and lodged in the jawbone.

Deputy Terry Robinson

responded to the call, and the girl was taken to Crosby Memorial Hospital in Picayune.

The bullet was surgically removed Monday at Slidell Memorial Hospital in Louisiana. Strong said the girl is recovering and in good condition.

"QUOTABLE QUOTES"

By Ellis C. Cuevas

Big festivities are scheduled in Waveland this weekend with the annual St. Clare Old Fashioned Fair and Seafood Festival.

The Fish Fry is the highlight on Friday from 5 to 9 p.m. under the direction of John Longo and his "Over the Hill Gang."

The Friday night event is an all-you-can-eat affair for $5 per person and we are told that Johnny and his crew will have some very good seafood.

I know where I will be eating my supper Friday night. There will also be games on Friday night as well as Saturday and Sunday.

On Saturday and Sunday, food booths will offer such items as crawfish bisque, crawfish and shrimp, BBQ chicken, jambalaya and, of course, hamburgers, hot dogs and po-boys.

The kids are not forgotten, and a Kiddieland will have a space walk and other events.

Entertainment scheduled includes, Southern Fire, Blair on the Air, Hearts 'n' Minds, M & M Music, and Wild Country.

Craft booths will offer many specialty items for all ages.

Local "guest chefs" will be showing their culinary skills on Saturday and Sunday at specific times.

A 5K/1K Run is to be held at 6 p.m. on Saturday. For the run information call Art Geary at 467-8085.

Don't forget, the craft booths which will offer many unusual items. Hours for Saturday and Sunday begin at noon.

The poor shrimp stood a small chance of survival on Tuesday with the opening of shrimping season in Mississippi waters.

The shrimpers had their motors running and nets ready to be dropped in the water as the noon opening got underway.

Boats were so plentiful, a traffic cop could have been used to direct the traffic.

In addition to catching shrimp, some of the shrimpers got a little more sunburn than they had anticipated. It was a very hot day.

The Washington Street Launch parking lot was filled with boat trailers, many attached to pickup trucks. I know a lot of folks took vacations in order to get a stock of shrimp for their freezers.

My brother Raymond was among those waiting for the opening, and he was busy Monday night getting everything ready, so all he had to do was launch his boat on Tuesday morning.

I wish the best of luck to all shrimpers.

Education: a warning and challenge

Sobering words came to Mississippi educators from the former United States Secretary of Education. And, along with the warning came the challenge.

Former Presidential cabinet member Dr. Terrell Bell was in Jackson to address a business-education conference.

This was the warning: "The United States cannot afford to continue the present level of performance of its public education system."

Then added Dr. Bell: "The United States is wasting its most valuable resource—its human resource."

Founder of the commission which produced the shocking education report of a decade ago, "A nation at Risk," Dr. Bell had words of praise for Mississippi.

This state, he said, is recognized as one of the top three states in the nation in terms of educational progress being made.

Then came the challenge. "The nation needs a role model," Dr. Bell concluded. "Mississippi has the opportunity now to become that model."

Mississippians will want to heed both the warning and the challenge as the Legislature goes back to work on June 18 to fund the BEST education program.

Mississippi may well be just a step away from becoming the education state of America.

PASS ALONG AN HEIRLOOM MORE VALUABLE THAN GOLD.

FROM THE SENATE

By Senator
Trent Lott

Congress' 'dire emergency' spending bill

On March 27, President Bush sent to the Congress requests for $720 million in emergency aid for the fledgling democracies in Nicaragua and Panama as well as disaster relief assistance for states like Mississippi and asked for its urgent consideration.

Two months later Congress answered that request with its passage of a $4.4 billion package that included the requested aid for Latin America and disasters, plus a whole lot more.

It's a good example of why the Congress cannot get spending under control, but it is also an example of the failure of the budget process. Until the Congress reforms that process, mandates deadlines for budgeting requirements and the timely movement of legislation, the emergency supplemental bill will always be a target for pushing state needs by individual senators and congressmen.

Mississippi's project to deepen the Gulfport Harbor to increase its commerce is a good illustration of the need for Congress to move its legislation on schedule. The President's Office of Management and Budget and the Army Corps of Engineers have approved our request for the project with construction set to begin in 1991.

The Mississippi Legislature had previously approved its share of the $43 million project in such a comparatively expeditious manner that the deadline in which it could obligate its appropriation was going to run out before the Congress even got to its bill.

The only avenue of preventing the state funds from reverting back to the Mississippi Treasury was the inclusion of language in the "dire emergency" spending bill which would permit the federal government to begin the paperwork with the State of Mississippi to get the project moving.

The "dire supplemental" bill also was the vehicle Mississippi used to obtain $45 million for the Army Ammunition Plant in Hancock County. Our Mississippi appropriators Thad Cochran and Jamie Whitten performed a skillful task in a difficult budget climate in convincing the bill's negotiators to approve this amount. There also is a directive in the bill to the Army to study alternative uses for the state of the art facility.

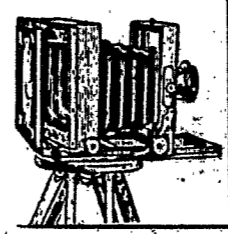

The "dire supplemental" bill contains more for Mississippi. It appropriates $249,000 to upgrade the community hospital in Rolling Fork. There is $180,000 to fund a much needed bridge improvement project in Leake County.

Finally, the "dire supplemental" bill directs the Postal Service to continue to provide full postal service to the people of Holly Springs including improving its North Memphis Street building.

If the President had the same authority as the governors of 43 states to line out items in a spending bill like this one, some of these Mississippi projects might be in jeopardy—not because they are frivolous, but because they should not be considered in the context of a President's emergency aid request.

I think the President should have the line item veto authority, but I also think Congress has to come to grips with the urgency of reforming the budget process.

As long as the proper legislative forums and bills are not being provided to meet the federal commitment to the individual needs of all states

WASHINGTON REPORT

By Senator
Thad Cochran

Cochran addresses Foundation

Senator Thad Cochran says wildlife conservation and recreation can play increasingly important roles in Mississippi's future development. The Senator's comments came at a meeting of the Delta Wildlife Foundation at Catfish Point, near Greenville.

He praised the work of the foundation's organizers and members and commented, "Although this region has prospered agriculturally and has registered steady progress in attracting industry during the past 30 years, there are enormous economic and environmental benefits from enhancing wildlife, fisheries and forestry resources in the Delta."

Cochran noted the Lower Mississippi Delta Development Commission's final report targeted tourism and recreation as potential economic boosters for the Delta region.

He pointed out that over 40 percent of Mississippi's population now participate in some type of wildlife recreation, contributing more than $780 million annually to the state's economy. Clarke Reed of Greenville, president of the Delta Wildlife Foundation, also cited the benefits from enhanced wildlife and recreation.

"About 90 percent of the Delta's land is privately owned," he said. "Currently, there is no local, private coordinator to encourage landowners to incorporate wildlife habitat features into their agricultural and forestry management practices. The foundation will help solve that problem."

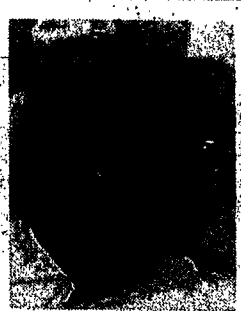

James Cummins of Stoneville, executive director of the foundation, said that education concerning wildlife, fisheries and forestry, and the recognition of these basic resources would be two major objectives. Hunter ethics will also be stressed, he said.

Initial projects will include a wood duck nest box, a Delta lakes restoration program and a songbird program. The foundation will provide technical assistance in development habitat for wildlife and fisheries.

YOUR BONES MAY BE DISSOLVING.

OSTEOPOROSIS CAN ROB YOU OF BONE MASS SILENTLY, WITHOUT PAIN, WITHOUT WARNING SIGNS.

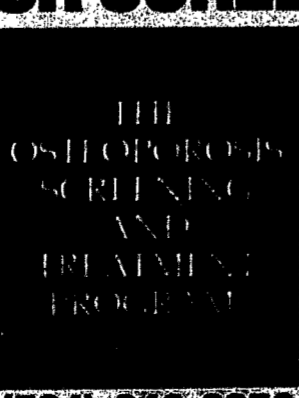

"Not me," you say? You may think osteoporosis affects only the elderly. Think again. It can strike anyone of any age, any race. If you're a woman over 30, you are especially at risk. Three out of four women fall victim to the disease. You can feel fit and healthy, even as your bones dissolve away. By the time you feel its effects, osteoporosis is already at a dangerous stage. Risk of fracture and painful, sometimes disfiguring complications can be well advanced.

The damage osteoporosis does can't be entirely undone, but the disease itself can be arrested and reversed. Catch it early enough, and you've got a good chance of avoiding crippling complications, too.

CALL FOR YOUR SCREENING, TODAY.

Ordinary X-rays can detect bone loss usually only after 30-40 percent of the bone is already gone. The SMH Osteoporosis Screening and Treatment Program employs leading-edge technologies to spot the disease in its earliest stages. No preparation is required for the screening. No shots, no probes, no discomfort. You remain fully clothed. It takes only minutes.

Dr. Mark C. Lueg, who developed the SMH Osteoporosis

(504) 649-6053
(800) 627-7733

Screening and Treatment Program, is a nationally recognized authority on the disease. Until recently, osteoporosis was thought incurable. But new treatment methods used by Dr. Lueg now make it possible to stop the loss of bone mass and actually rebuild bone density.

Maybe you feel just fine, but the only way to find out for sure whether you have osteoporosis, the "silent thief", is to call now for a screening.

COOKING UP A STORM

By Katie McGuire Caire

There are few aromas finer than that of freshly brewed coffee, in my opinion, an opinion shared by many, for coffee is a way of life the world around and has been for many a year.

Some like it black and undorned first thing in the morning; others prefer it with cream or milk and sugar; and many of us enjoy at intervals all through the day, Satan-hot or icy cold, depending upon the season and our whims. And, how the taste-buds tingle when those famous finales are offered—the brandy-accented Cafe Brulot, the Viennese coffee, and especially that favorite of mine, Irish Coffee!

Just as the true flavor of the Frenchman's Cafe Au Lait is achieved by the simultaneous pouring and blending of the hot coffee and hot milk or cream into a cup, so the true flavor of Irish Coffee is obtained through the blend of hot coffee and Irish whiskey through the cream, served in a warmed, stemmed Irish coffee glass.

There are variations, of course, when it comes to Irish coffee, but most are in agreement as to the basic recipe: first, warm a stemmed glass, put in the sugar and enough very hot coffee to dissolve it, stirring well. Top up with the Irish whiskey to within an inch of the brim.

Then, holding a teaspoon across the glass, curved side up, pour the cold cream carefully over it, slowly, slowly, so that it floats on the surface of the coffee, and one sips the coffee through the cream, which, of course, is not to be stirred in, ever!

This recipe which I've used for years, comes straight from Erin, by way of a delightful book, "Traditional Irish Recipes" published by the O'Brien Press of Dublin, no less!

If you want exact proportions, here's:

"REALLY IRISH" IRISH COFFEE
1 double measure Irish whiskey

1 cup strong, hot black coffee
1 Tbsp. "pouring" cream or "double" (heavy cream)

1 heaped teaspoon sugar.

As you've no doubt realized by now, Irish Coffee is a favorite of mine, and that's what I had planned to order at the end of dinner when Bill and Roi and I stopped off recently in Pensacola at McGuire's Irish Pub.

Son Jack had enjoyed McGuire's on a couple of visits to Pensacola and had recommended it and its proprietor, William McGuire Martin, and his delicious food and such to his brother; and Bill had subsequently carried on a rather humorous correspondence with McGuire's, so I was eager to try it, also.

Well known all over the country, McGuire's occupies Pensacola's original old firehouse and boasts the antiques, Irish Tiffany lamps and other touches of a turn-of-the-century New York Pub. We thoroughly enjoyed the experience, from the lilting Irish tunes to the delicious food and brew to the Irish coffee finale.

But with a difference! It was Frozen Irish Coffee! And, if you think a Frozen Daquiri is sublime, just try a frozen Irish coffee! I've tried making it since my return home, but, somehow, it isn't the same—must have been the ambience of McGuire's!

But, once in the mood, I decided to assemble a sort of Irish Coffee dessert, and came up with:

IRISH COFFEE MOUSSE

1/4 cup Irish whiskey
1 Tbsp. gelatin (unflavored)
2 cups strong, black coffee
1/4 cup sugar
2 cups stiffly whipped, sweetened heavy cream

Soften the gelatin in the Irish whiskey. Add the coffee and sugar, and cook, stirring until the gelatin dissolves. Cool to the consistency until it thickens to the consistency of, say, a thick oil. Fold in the whipped cream and chill in Irish coffee glasses, or parfait glasses. (Six to eight servings).

Here's a variation on the theme:

IRISH COFFEE PARFAIT

2 envelopes unflavored gelatin
1/2 cup sugar (for coffee)
1 1/2 cups boiling-hot strong brewed coffee
1/3 cup Irish whiskey
1 cup heavy cream
2 Tbsp. sugar (for cream)

Combine the gelatin and the half-cup of sugar in a medium-size bowl. Stir in the just-boiling coffee until the sugar and gelatin dissolve, then stir in the Irish whiskey. Chill until the gelatin is as thick as unbeaten egg whites.

Pour gelatin mixture into parfait or other dessert glasses, and chill for two hours, or until the gelatin is firm. Beat the cream and the remaining two spoons of sugar until stiff, in a small bowl, and spoon atop the coffee gelatin. (Six to eight servings).

(P.S. As we left McGuire's that evening, puckish Bill (whose sense of humor is as offbeat as mine) left his card with the notation to Prop. William McGuire Martin that the "real William McGuire" had been there and would return to claim his kingdom. Hope they take dear old mother along!)

Celery is nutritious, low calorie addition

By Ann O. Rushing

Whatever is on your grocery shopping list, don't forget a stalk or two of crisp, green celery. Because of the efficient way in which they grow, harvest and transport this green vegetable, it's almost always an excellent buy. It's nutritious, but low in calories.

Best of all you can eat the whole stalk. Use the leafy tops in mixed green salads. They taste good and "extend" salad greens.

And, of course, celery tops make marvelous seasoners for soups, sauces and all kinds of stews. Use fresh celery leaves as a garnish instead of parsley.

Obviously, this is starting from the top. Then, the bigger "ribs" can be cooked as a hot vegetable or—like the tops—added to cooked mixtures.

It's smart to save the delicate inner ribs—celery "heart"—as a relish or as a munchable.

Remember some of these good ways of using celery, both for home and company meals:

The long-famous Waldorf salad which is an easy mixture of chopped celery, unpeeled red apples, a few chopped walnuts and enough mayonnaise to moisten.

If you're counting calories, make a celery-mushroom salad. Mix equal amounts of diced celery and sliced fresh mushrooms. Use a couple of tablespoons chopped scallions and moisten with vegetable cocktail juice or a stingy bit of French dressing.

And this is an easy, delicious hot vegetable:

Cook 2 cups sliced celery for 15 minutes, in a cup of slightly salted water. Then add a 10-ounce package of frozen peas and cook about 5 minutes until the peas are tender. Drain, if necessary. Add a can of condensed cream of chicken soup, a little milk, about a teaspoon lemon juice and about a quarter teaspoon mint flakes, crushed. Heat thoroughly and serve.

Celery teams beautifully with hard-cooked eggs. For instance, saute a couple of strips of bacon (diced) until crisp. Reserve bacon bits. To fat in pan add a quart of sliced celery, a third cup minced onion and salt and pepper to taste. Stir in bacon bits. Spoon around edge of 12 by 8-inch casserole.

Set 6 halved hard-cooked eggs in center. Stir a quarter teaspoon garlic powder into an 8-ounce can of tomato sauce and pour over eggs. Cover and bake about a half hour in 325° oven. Garnish with chow mein noodles.

Creamed celery is very good garnished with chopped roasted peanuts. Make your usual cream sauce and add a little minced onion. Stir in chopped peanuts. Or, for that matter, blend in crunchy peanut butter. The kids, especially, will go for this one.

Rice and celery are a fine combination. Use the rice cooking recipe on your brand of rice and cook it in half clam juice and half water for 10 minutes. Then uncover.

Add 2 cups minced celery, 2 tablespoons onion powder and a good dollop of butter. Cover and cook another 15 minutes until celery and rice are both tender. This is a very good accompaniment for fish or chicken dishes.

Elrod is against the culverts because he said, "No one can tell you how much water will be drained or where it will fall."

The council called a recess until June 19 to research the matter.

Robert Van Peski of Chantilly Terrace presented a petition to the council from residents of State Street seeking to have a structure located at 303 State St. condemned, torn down and removed, including the remnants of a shed located in the backyard.

Van Peski said his wife owns the house next door to the structure and has had several problems trying to rent and sell the home because of "the menace next door."

"The side of the house facing State Street has been painted with conspicuous coats of bright, white paint, providing the casual observer with a false impression of responsible property maintenance," said Van Peski.

"The sides and back of the structure are totally unpainted and the boards are dry, rotted and warped. Several side boards are missing, exposing rotting and termite-damaged support beams," he said.

Van Peski concluded, "The structure is unsound, a fire and safety hazard, unoccupied and uninhabitable; the value of adjacent properties is decreased and other properties on the street become less attractive to prospective tenants or home buyers."

The council followed the procedure of setting up a public hearing at their June 17 meeting. Cornelius Ladner spoke on behalf of Rosie McGowan of New Orleans whose Bay St. Louis home, located 330 St. George St., is in threat of being destroyed.

The council has already given McGowan approximately one year to renovate her home which presently serves as a menace to society. Ladner requested an 120 days, or four months, extension on her permit.

Ladner stated McGowan has tried to get people to work on her house, who instead, have taken her money and not worked. He said she has made the effort, but needs more time to find honest workers.

The Council passed a motion to grant McGowan 120 days with 30 day increments in which marked progress must be noticeable. If work is not shown within 30 days, the council will go ahead with their public hearing to destroy the structure.

Gregory Ames of 504 South Beach, Bay St. Louis, complained about the property surrounding Big E Grocery Store, which he feels is unsightly. He requested increased police patrol in the area and attempted to enlist the council's support in getting the property cleaned up.

Dottie Overall, representing the Small Business Administration, offered the organization's services to the city to enhance economic development.

Free hamburgers, video rentals await blood donors

The Bay St. Louis community will host a Red Cross Blood Drive on Wednesday, June 13 at the American Legion Post 139 on Green Meadow Road from 1-7 p.m.

Each donor who registers to donate blood will receive a coupon for a free hamburger from Burger King and a coupon for a free video rental from the Video Depot.

Area businesses donated these incentives because they realized the critical need for blood that is often experienced during the summer months, and they wanted to offer Bay St. Louis residents an extra incentive to donate at the drive.

Summer is traditionally a critical time for blood collections. Many regular blood donors don't think they have time, or simply forget to give blood during the summer.

Unfortunately, summer activities that keep donors busy also cause an increased need for blood. The summer months are also used to schedule elective surgeries, another cause for increased blood usage.

Area businesses are encouraged to show their support and concern for the community by allowing employees time off to donate during the work day. Area civic groups are also asked to show their support by encouraging their members to donate at the drive.

Donors must be 17 years old or older, weigh at least 110 pounds and be in good health.

He said the area to be sprayed is determined by the amount and thickness of growth and the importance of the power line to the community. For instance, the company is especially careful to keep the area under feeder lines to hospitals, nursing homes and other such facilities clear.

Mitchell added that if an area has not been sprayed yet, it probably will not be sprayed in the future.

BACK TO NATURE

By Lydia Schultz

Careful placement of nesting boxes pays off for bird lovers

Special to the Echo
By LYDIA SCHULTZ

Six years ago I had a Great Crested Flycatcher's nest in my back yard in a gourd. That was my first experience with that bird. I didn't realize that the same pair would return to the same nest each year.

I believe that original gourd became the home of some bees and so the Flycatchers never came back to it. But after that first year, I became ever so tuned in to the call of the Great Crested Flycatcher and its lovely yellow breast with steel gray back and rufous tail.

It's a bird that easily captures your heart. They winter in South America and you can count on hearing its loud "weeek" within the first week of April.

After that first year I always looked for the birds to nest again. I sold many woodpecker houses telling people that not only would Red Headed Woodpeckers and Flickers nest in them, but also Great Crested Flycatchers.

Each year they would check out a delapidated wooden Purple Martin house that I had up, but it was never right. Off they would go, leaving me feeling badly.

Natural cavities are a problem for birds like this. They don't "excavate" their cavities like woodpeckers do. They depend on pre-existing holes.

There's tough competition out there among Woodpeckers, Screech Owls, Starlings, Flycatchers, gray squirrels and flying squirrels. So, yes, I felt badly as they would go all around my yard for a week.

I'd put a house here, too late. I'd see them there, and I'd move the house—too late. My poor husband put the ladder up and took it down; nailed a house here, moved it.

Well, this year, that determination paid off. Finally the Flycatchers chose one of the four woodpecker boxes I have. But it was not without many anxious moments. I watched for two weeks as they checked out the old Martin box and others. They finally chose the house near the old gourd and I watched them build their nest for four days—then abandon it for a week!

They checked every other cavity in the yard and neighborhood. I felt ill. But I was okay because I thought if the critters couldn't find anything in my yard, they were too darned picky, and that was their tough luck.

Screech Owls in the front would scowl and fuss if we were to close, but they never stopped feeding. We didn't intimidate them at all. They fledged also before the weird yard were coming along nicely with their nest and I got to see the Red Phase (female, I believe) come and go and the Gray Phase (male) bring in worms and lizards to feed the apparently hatched owlettes. (On June 1, three downy-clad immatures fledged.)

Amidst the finicky Flycatchers antics, the Tufted Titmouses scurried back and forth for several weeks feeding their young until one morning I saw tiny heads peeking out. By that afternoon the nest box was silent and they had fledged while I was at work.

The Carolina Wrens built a nest in a box (not a nest box, but a cardboard box) on my bathroom window sill. They Flycatchers finally returned to the original nest box to which they had brought four days' worth of nesting material. Whew!

As of this writing, I see them frequently coming and going. I watched as a squirrel was going up the tree, the male Flycatcher came out of the blue like a streak of lightning (a little drama never hurt) and landed on top of the box.

They stared at one another and all of a sudden the bird started making clicking sounds and flying into the squirrel three or four times.

The squirrel scurried up the tree onto a limb pretty far from the house. That didn't satisfy the bird. He went after the squirrel again. I felt like they were totally capable of handling the care of their new home.

Upon returning from work that afternoon, I saw this same bird chasing a starling all over the yard. I cheered him on. In my book, European Starlings have been the downfall of our native nesters.

So, the nest boxes are working. The Screech Owls return to the same nest year after year and so do the flycatchers. There's always a Chickadee or Titmouse or Wren to fill the smaller houses. If they don't get used one year, I take them down and move them. I'm still working on Downy Woodpeckers, Flickers and Red Headed Woodpeckers.

It's a challenge, you know, to see if you can figure out what will please them. Then you know you're in tune with Nature.

Select best weapons for war on fire ants

By Linda S. Moore
Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service

Winning the war against fire ants may be difficult, but selecting the best weapons and getting an early start will help win some of the battles.

Dr. Jim Hamer, entomologist with the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service, said spring is a good time for poisoning fire ants. Commercial baits and drenches are the most effective methods.

"Many people try to get rid of fire ants by using ineffective methods that only aggravate the ants," Hamer said. "If the queen is not destroyed or unable to reproduce, attacks on mounds will not cause activity to cease but will cause activity to move to other nearby sites."

As the days become warmer, ants increase their activity and the queen moves closer to the ground surface. Worker ants forage along the surface for food to take to her.

Baits such as Affirm, Amdro or Logic work as either growth regulators or insecticides. Most baits are slow acting materials that may require six to eight weeks for noticeable results but will provide effective control.

Hamer said to avoid covering the mound excessively with bait because that can cause a disturbance, and the queen will retreat further down into the ground. Scattering bait at the broadcast rate is often more effective than direct mound treatment and can be used when mounds are not present.

Mound drenches such as Sevin, Dursban or Diazinon provide almost immediate results, but mounds may require more than one treatment. Use a well-marked container for mixing the solution.

If the mound is not adequately saturated, the poison may not reach and kill the queen, and the ants will move. Scatter bait in the surrounding area to ensure that satellite mounds do not develop.

Baits and drenches do not work as well during the hottest part of the summer.

"Optimum soil temperature for baits to be effective is from 70 to 90 degrees. Ants do less foraging for food during extremely hot weather," Hamer said. "In the hottest summer months, the queen retreats deeper to cooler soil requiring a larger amount of water in a drench mixture."

Hamer said increasing the amount of the drench chemical recommended is not necessary to reach further down in the ground. Increasing the amount of water will improve coverage and control.

Poisons used as directed are safe on the environment. Using methods that are not specified for destroying fire ants are not only less effective, but could have other hazards or disadvantages.

Do not use gasoline or other combustible liquids, especially if fire is part of the plan. The liquid by itself may injure the user, kill the grass and some ants but not necessarily the queen. This is also not a cost effective method.

Grass clippings may be beneficial to yard turf

By Dr. Milo Burnham
Horticulturist
Mississippi Cooperative
Extension Service

It's grass cutting season, and my guest columnist Dr. David Nagel, who is the extension turf specialist, offers advice on dealing with leftover grass clippings.

To bag or not to bag, that is the question. Whether it's nobler to have an unsullied vista after mowing or to suffer the stripes and errors of letting the clippings fall where they may has become a hot item in state legislatures.

Twenty-two states currently have legislation that bans yard waste from landfills. Only 12 states have no plans for dealing with the problem of disposal of grass clippings, weeds, tree and shrub trimmings, and other yard waste. Mississippi is one of those, but no new landfills will be approved until the Legislature acts. What is the fuss about?

Grass clippings may constitute as much as 18 percent of the landfill volume in mowing season. Being neat people who accede to the desires of the garbage crew, we put these grass clippings in plastic bags.

Clippings inside of a plastic bag in a landfill do not decompose very quickly, if at all. The U.S. is rapidly filling its landfills, so anything which can reduce the volume of trash to be buried is being considered.

The irony of this problem is that there need be no disposal of grass clippings.

Allowing the clippings to remain where they are is seldom harmful to the turf, and may be beneficial. The only reason for removing clippings of properly mown grass is aesthetic.

The clippings serve as source of slow release nitrogen, potassium and other elements as microorganisms decompose them. Removing clippings from heavily fertilized turf may remove as much as 150 pounds of nitrogen per acre.

The young leaves are easily decomposed by bacteria and fungi, and add to the overall health of the ecosystem. The nutrient-dense leaves allow the microorganisms to more efficiently decompose old stems, stolons and other lignified materials that contribute to thatch. Freshly mown leaf blades do not contribute to thatch accumulation.

If you can't stand to walk across the yard and have clippings stick to your feet, or if you don't want to have your pet or child track grass in the house, by all means collect the clippings.

Consider using them to make compost or give them to a neighbor who does make compost. Grass clippings are a welcome addition to the compost heap.

Do not pile the clippings by themselves and expect to get compost. The thick mat of clippings will not allow air and water movement through the pile and you wind up with a mess of foul smelling grass clippings rather than something useful.

Something needs to be done if there is a thick enough layer of clippings to shade the turf from the sun. Either pick up the clippings, or allow them to dry for no more than two days and run the mower over them again to disperse. Mowing a second time spreads the clippings over a wider area and makes the pieces smaller.

By running your mower over the clippings a second time, you speed the process of getting rid of accumulated clippings and you trim the grass to the proper height to minimize clipping problems at the next regular mowing.

Mulching mowers are designed to cut clippings into small pieces. The smaller pieces decompose faster and can fall between the blades of grass more easily. Many manufacturers either have or are designing mulching mowers to aid in this waste management problem.

Legislature action good for landowners

By Steve Dickey

I have several friends

A report by the American Forestry Association, executive vice president of the Mississippi Forestry Association, cites the 1990 Mississippi legislative session for supporting the interests of forestry.

Legislators listened to testimony from the association and other forestry groups, then passed three bills that will benefit Mississippi's tree farmers and forest industry for years to come. They deserve a big thank you.

One of the bills created the exemption of property tax and valuations on forestry equipment. Farmers do not pay property taxes on the equipment they use to grow and harvest crops. In the past, the same held true for tree farmers, harvesters and the forest industry because timber is also an agricultural crop.

About five years ago, forestry lost its exemption and equipment began to be taxed. House Bill 1570, which passed on March 14, clarified the original agriculture tax exemption to include timber crops.

This bill was supported by the Mississippi Farm Bureau Federation and the Mississippi Loggers Association, as well as MFA.

Tax exemption is important to people dependent on the forest for a living. Forestry equipment is naturally big and rugged to do the tough job required. This means the equipment is also expensive.

An ad valorem tax on this equipment would greatly inflate harvesting and regeneration costs ultimately paid by the tree farmer and landowner.

Tree farmers pay their fair share of income, land and severance (timber cutting) taxes. They don't need an additional tax burden. Thanks to this exemption, forest landowners will not face this tax burden in the future.

A second bill that passed this session created a special category of real estate appraisers for rural areas and timber. Senate Bill 2931 made Mississippi the first state in the nation—we're No. 1—to establish a timberland real estate appraiser classification. Real estate appraisers will now be licensed and placed under the jurisdiction of the Mississippi Real Estate Commission.

Licensing appraisers for timberland is a big plus for forest landowners and lenders of money. Appraisers in this category will be trained to value timberland. Better training will lead to better estimates of true value of timber.

Before this law was passed, residential home or commercial property appraisers with no experience in estimating timber volume and values were appraising our timberland. William W. May, representing the Association of Consulting Foresters, and MFA lobbied hard for this legislation.

Hopefully, the quality of future appraisals will be better than some of those in the past. You can help. When you have timberland appraised, make sure the appraiser is qualified for timber estimation.

A third bill that is now law ended the unsafe and unethical practice of road hunting. According to Senate Bill 2509, all firearms other than handguns must be unloaded both inside and outside vehicles on public roads during open seasons on deer and turkey.

This new law does not address loitering on public roads, but officials of the Mississippi Department of Wildlife, Fisheries and Parks view this road hunting law as enforceable.

Forest landowners should be happy to have safer roads to travel and safer forests in which to work and enjoy. This law may also help reinstate a basic right to control hunting on their property. We should thank the SMART Council (Sportsmen of Mississippi Acting Responsibly Together) for their lobbying efforts on this bill.

Hancock grain loan rates set

Pearl River-Hancock County loan rates for 1990 wheat, barley, oats and rye have been announced by the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

The rates reflect changes in the national average price support rates for each of these crops, county ASCS official Gennin said.

The per bushel loan rates are: wheat, $2.04 for Pearl River and $2.10 for Hancock; oats, $3.83 for both counties.

Some county rates were adjusted to reflect location and transportation costs and other factors. Gennin said these adjustments were limited by current legislation to a two-percent change in addition to the change in the national average price support rate from the 1989 crop.

The ASCS official said price support loans give farmers an opportunity to obtain operating capital while holding their crop for later sale. To qualify for loans on these commodities, farmers must participate in the acreage reduction program for the commodity.

Copies of loan and purchase rates may be obtained from the county ASCS office, or by writing to the Cotton, Grain and Rice Price Support Division, ASCS-USDA, P.O. Box 2415, Washington, D.C. 20013.

American Legion blasts Gulfport

The American Legion baseball program officially began last weekend as the Bay St. Louis-based team Clement R. Bontemps Post 139 defeated Gulfport 8-5 last Sunday in Gulfport.

Coached by Frank Pernicaro and assisted by Mike Weems and Neil Favre, Post 139 will play an ambitious 35-game schedule against teams from Jackson, Meridian, Biloxi and Jonesboro, Ga.

"For our first outing, we played extremely well," said Pernicaro. "We have a real good group of young people—no discipline problems. In the Gulfport game we led the entire way and went into the seventh inning leading 8-1."

Eighteen boys comprise the team roster. Post 139 will be in the Southern American District.

Will Seymour threw three hitless innings in the Gulfport game and was relieved by Tom Dickinson who also held Gulfport without a hit and was credited with the win. David Weems finished on the mound for Post 139.

Leading the hitting attack was Adam Breerwood who went 3 for 3, Charlie Mitchell who went 2 for 4, and Kendall Daniels who had a double and 2 RBI's. John Rutherford also homered for Post 139.

Other team members include Mick Quinlan, Gerit Carver, Tom Brink, Mick Quinlan, Kevin Jacobi, and Robbie Bourgeois.

The team will be back in action this Saturday in Bay St. Louis with a doubleheader scheduled against Jonesboro, Ga. at Bay High's ballpark. First game begins at 10 a.m. followed immediately by the second game at noon.

Smith is prize catch for Meridian

Cedric Smith, a talented multi-sport letterman who was a five-year varsity baseball starter for St. Stanislaus, has signed a scholarship to play baseball at Meridian Jr. College under Coach Corky Palmer.

Meridian always fields an excellent baseball team, so the signing of Smith, recently named to the Mississippi High School All-State baseball squad, will be a valuable addition to the team.

Although he was born in Picayune, Smith lived in Bay St.

Louis since he was three years old. A product of the Bay St. Louis Little League program, Smith has played his high school, Babe Ruth, and American Legion baseball for Bay St. Louis.

Several of Smith's baseball coaches had high praise for Cedric's talents.

"As a young player, Cedric possessed a good, live arm and good arm speed," noted Coach Fred Weems. "Arm speed is a lot like leg speed—it's not something that you can teach or condition. Either you have it or you don't."

Coach Weems also noted that Meridian's coach, Corky Palmer, was a catcher for USM in his collegiate years, and Weems stated that a former catcher can provide valuable coaching tips to young pitchers.

Jerry Spell, who coached Smith this past season, said that final statistics on Smith reveal a 0.97 ERA and a .353 batting average.

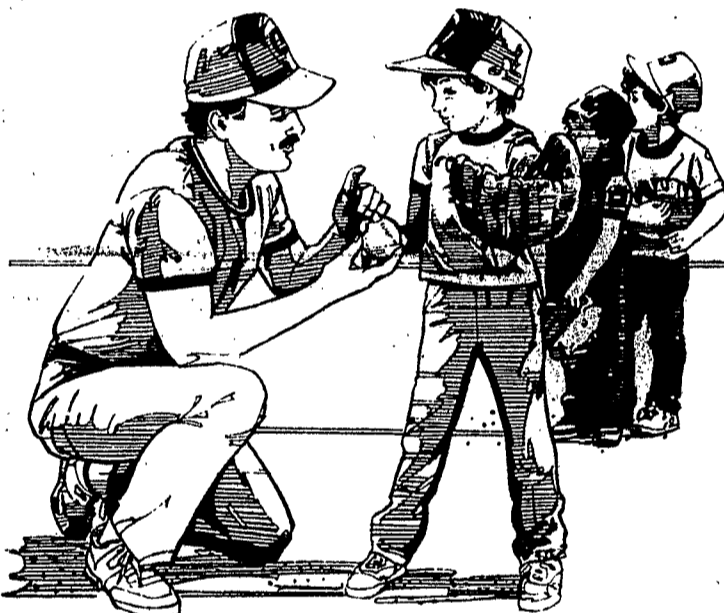

"Cedric is a natural thrower," said Spell. "I talked with Coach Palmer from Meridian on several occasions and he liked what he saw in Cedric's mechanics."

As quarterback on the Rock-A-Chaw football team, Smith threw 16 touchdown passes in ten games his senior year.

Smith has several ballgames left to play before he begins his collegiate career. This Saturday, June 9, Smith will pitch in the South Mississippi All-Star Baseball Classic at Hollis Field in Biloxi. This team is made up

Variety of sports offered at MSU summer camps

A first-ever soccer camp has joined an attractive five-sport lineup of athletic camps available for youth this summer through the Mississippi State University Athletic Department.

Nationally renowned soccer coach Joe Clarke, sixth-year head coach at perennial powerhouse St. Louis University, will direct the MSU Soccer Camp June 10-14 on the MSU campus.

Clarke is a veteran of 17 years of soccer camp experience and a seven-year veteran of professional soccer. The cost of the camp is $225 per camper.

The 1990 MSU Football Camp, directed by fifth-year Bulldog head football coach Rocky Felker, has been scheduled July 15-18.

The camp is open to youth who will be in the first through 12th grades this fall. Camp cost is $150 for resident campers and $100 for day campers.

Fresh from guiding MSU's Basketball Bulldogs to their second NIT appearance, head coach Richard Williams will direct two youth basketball camp sessions for boys this summer at Mississippi State University.

The initial session runs June 17-21 for boys entering fourth through eighth grades, while the second session, open to boys entering the ninth through 12th grades this fall, is set June 24-28. Cost for either of the two camps is $195.

First-year Lady Bulldog basketball head coach Jerry Henderson directs his first summer basketball camp for girls at Mississippi State University June 28-July 1. Open to girls entering the seventh through 12th grades this fall, the camp costs $150 per person.

Another sellout is anticipated for the widely-acclaimed Bulldog Baseball Camps, which have been divided into six sessions this summer.

Directed by MSU assistant coach Joe Hudak, a camp staff member the last four summers, the camps will feature guest lectures by Bulldog head baseball coach Ron Polk.

Camp sessions for youngsters 12-14 years old is set June 17-22 and costs $255. Camp sessions for youth age 9-11 are scheduled June 24-27 and June 27-30 and cost $185.

Young men age 15 to rising high school seniors can choose from either of two regular sessions, July 8-13 and July 15-20, each at a cost of $255, and a specialized Pitcher-Catcher Camp July 5-7, costing $160 per camper.

The A. J. Pitts Tennis Centre, the site of the 1990 Southeastern Conference Women's Tennis Championships, will be the setting for the MSU Tennis Camp, directed by Bulldog tennis coach Andy Jackson.

Camp dates are June 10-14 and the cost is $225 for resident campers and $175 for day campers.

Campers for all MSU summer athletic camps will be housed in air conditioned dormitories, eat at university dining facilities and utilize other university recreation facilities while at Mississippi State University.

11th Annual Beach Front Festival

The 11th annual Bay St. Louis Beach Front Festival drew an estimated crowd of 8,000 Sunday afternoon. There was plenty to do, see and hear to take one's mind off the heat of the day, including performances by the St. Rose de Lima Choir, Change to Eden and other musical groups. In the photo above, music lovers gather near the Beach Blvd./Court Street stage to listen to Change to Eden, while at left, a Civil War re-enactment group — the 5th Company, Battalion Washington Artillery of New Orleans — takes a moment to pose with their cannon. Company members are, from left, Robert Bonner, Don Watson, Glenn Harrison, Keith Cangelosi, Glen Cangelosi, Captain Christian Becker and Sgt. Wayne Downey.

Children's Art Festival

The first Children's Arts Festival was a big hit with kids — and grown-ups — of all ages, drawing a crowd of 1,000 children and many adults, some of whom didn't even have families. Above right, a shy child receives a friendly nudge to get closer to Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtle Michelangelo. Below right, contemporary Christian singer Cheri Statler, of Nashville, Tenn., leads a group of children in a song. At left, Rhian Bush of Long Beach tries her hand at making a bubble while Caitlin Crounes watches.

IT PAYS TO RECYCLE AT DELCHAMPS

Recycle Aluminum Cans At All Delchamps Super Markets.

Now recycling is as easy as going to your neighborhood Delchamps. It's fast. It's simple. And it pays three ways!

- First, you can put your refund to work through one of several community charities.
- If you choose, you can use your refund to save on Delchamps groceries.
- Or you can even get your refund back in cash!

No matter what the payoff, you'll be doing your part to keep our world a cleaner place. And with dumps and landfills everywhere reaching their limit, it's up to all of us to pitch in!
